LAMPIRAN

BOROBUDUR

Matahari bersinar tinggi di pagi hari hutan pun membisikkan nyanyian mazmur memuji, dan bukit-bukit berkerundung asap.

samar-samar memantulkan cahaya redup seakan-akan bumi sedang bermimpi.

Sendiri Raja duduk disinggasana pepohonan kelapa, mata memandang teruju sesuatu,

sedang Sang hati riang gembira dengan
penuh harapan ceria,
menyebarluaskan tembang pujian,

Melalui tapak jalan waktu,
yang nun tak kunjung
berakhirk,
"Biarlah Budha menjadi tempatku berlindung" ... dan seterusnya.

oleh: Rabindranath Tagore
(Terjemahan: Achmad Gibreil)

WHEN MY CORPSE MET THE BUDDHA

When my corpse met the Buddha
I said nothing.
He asked me nothing.

He pondered for a while and then
like a lonesome schoolboy bored with a picnic he started scribbling my name on the mossy stone of history.

The reply he would have had, if he had asked me, now grows in the twisted twigs of the peepal tree near in that ruined wall in the distance, burns like a star in the blue of a virgin's eyes
in the sordid moment of unfelt ecstasy, melts waxlike in a mother's tears
and drips on the stony heart of her son, blossoms in the fragrance of a child's lips
and adorns the hairy chest of the fool.

HIROSHIMA

On this day, the sun
appeared—no, not slowly over the horizon—
but right in the city square.
A blast of dazzle poured over,
not from the middle sky,
but from the earth torn raggedly open.

Human shadows, dazed and lost, pitched in every direction : this blaze,
not risen from the east,
smashed in the city's heart—
an immense wheel
off Death's swart suncar, spinning down and apart
in every direction.
Instant of a sun's rise and set;
vision annihilating flare one compressed afternoon.

And then ?
It was not human shadows that lengthened, paled and died ;
it was men suddenly become as mist, then gone.
The shadows stay :
burned on rock, stones of these vacant streets.

A sun conjured by men converted men to air, to nothing ;
white shadows signed on the black rock give back man's witness to himself.

WHO IS THE ENEMY ?

These cannons, tanks, bombers and guns—
where did you get them ?
at whom are they aimed ?
Are these your gifts from the land of Waris and Iqbal ?
Raging forth from the fields of Nanak,
you want now to burn the house of Kabir ?

Till yesterday you were slaves, so were we.
The season of freedom had come after a shower of blood.

Only the dawn's first breeze has moved, flowers have not yet opened their eyes,
the spring has yet to smile.
Who knows how many blind stars—listless eyes—
how many pale roses—empty palms—still crave for colour and light ?

What else do we have beside this shared grief ?

Together we should have sought the cure, planted the garden with our own hands
and, sharing each other's sorrow, celebrated the building of new homes.

But I see a strange look in your eyes;
your steps lurch—what do they seek ?
On whom will you test your rapier's edge ?
This is not a mere boundary, as you think;
it marks the site of our body, heart and soul.
Beautiful, tall, youthful, sacred, chaste,
it is known as Kashmir, paradise on earth;
its name is Delhi; its name, Punjab;
we often call it with affection, Lucknow.
