Dear Sirs

I really must complain about a Lechstein piano (serial number 188965) which I purchased brand new from your sole agent in Kuala Lumpur, the Starsky Piano Company, in August 1994.

Six months ago, a bass string broke while I was practising. Since then, no fewer than five additional bass strings have broken. The most recent occurrence was only two days ago. I have certainly never abused or neglected the piano in any way. So I am sure you know how upsetting I feel when I had to call in the piano tuner.

I realized that the one-year guarantee period on the instrument has just expired, but I think you will agree that your company should stand by the quality of the product it produces, particularly since it is so highly priced.

I strongly hope that you will look into the matter immediately and take steps either to replace the defective instrument or refund me the full amount.

Yours faithfully

(Micheal Chuah)
