Abstract

Al-Daraqutni was no stranger to the fraternity of past hadith scholars. Some scholars criticized his commentaries on several hadiths from the al-Sahihayn, particularly pertaining to al-Daraquutni’s mastery of the discipline of ‘ilal al-hadith. Al-Nawawi, one of the critics, considered al-Daraquutni’s methodology in hadith criticism to be corrupted and weak. This research, which is wholly qualitative, involving data collection through library research, analyzes those criticisms and concludes on the question whether they coincide with al-Nawawi’s own views. The research findings show that al-Daraquutni’s methods was neither corrupted nor weak as alleged but had firm footing in the methodologies previously practiced by hadith scholars in ancient times. The study finds among others that the methodology of al-Daraquutni in assessing narrations of hadith which has auxiliary part added by a trustworthy narrator (ziyadah al-thiqah) as well as sole narration by one narrator (al-tafarrud) were based on correct indicators (qarinah). Therefore, he does not accept nor reject such narration completely. The method of al-Nawawi on the other hand sees that ziyadah al-thiqah and al-tafarrud narrations from trustworthy narrators are acceptable.

Keywords: Analysis, criticism, al-Nawawi, al-Daraquutni, ‘ilal al-hadith.
1. Introduction

Al-Daraqutni was one of the renowned scholars who made an imprint in the Islamic world circa the 4th century. His mastery in various fields of knowledge was recognized by scholars. Al-Dhahabi (d. 784 H) in Siyar described him as a sea of knowledge and one of revered Imam in the world (1984). Al-Azhari (d. 370 H) also stated that when al-Daraqutni conveys knowledge in any field, it is probable that he knows everything (Al-Dhahabi, 1984). However, al-Daraqutni’s mastery in the discipline of hadith was, to the agreement of many scholars, regarded to be the most prominent. According to ‘Abd al-Ghani (d. 409 H), the finest commentators of the hadiths of the Prophet (pbuh) were among the following three: ‘Ali bin Al-Madini in his time, Musa bin Harun in his time and al-Daraqutni in his time (Al-Baghdadi, 2001). In addition, Abu ‘Abd Rahman al-Sulami (d. 412 H) also said: “I bear witness in the name of Allah that no one compares to our teacher al-Daraqutni on the surface of the earth in the knowledge of the Prophet’s hadiths, the athar of the companion, the tabi’in and atba’ al-tabi’in (Al-Dhahabi, 1984). The testimony of these two scholars indirectly revealed al-Daraqutni’s high stature in the field of hadith.

Al-Daraqutni was also known as a prolific scholar in the production of academic works. According to ‘Abd Allah al-Ruhayli, the works written by al-Daraqutni across multi-disciplines of knowledge resulted in an impressive number of books, amounting to sixty-one writings (Al-Ruhayli, 2000). One of his famous works is al-Iizzamat wa al-Tatabbu’. In essence, al-Daraqutni wrote it in order to comment on the status of several hadiths found in the al-Sahihayn. However, in light of the al-Sahihayn’s status as an authoritative scripture second only to the al-Quran, some scholars retaliated against al-Daraqutni’s commentaries, one of whom was al-Nawawi (d. 676 H).

1.1. Introduction to the Discipline of Sciences of ‘Iilal al-Hadith

A discussion on the discipline of ‘ilal al-hadith would be incomplete without the definition of the word ‘illah itself. According to Ibn Manzur (n.d.) (d. 711 H), the word ‘illah literally means al-marad, which means disease. From the point of terminology, ‘illah according to Ibn al-Salah (2002) and al-Nawawi (1985) means a phrase that appears to be authentic yet contains hidden defects affecting that authenticity. Accordingly, the defective hadith or al-mu’allah hadith would mean a hadith containing defects effecting its authenticity yet seemingly having a perfectly authentic appearance (Ibn al-Salah, 2002).

Scholars often paid attention to discussions on the discipline of ‘ilal al-hadith. Abdul Rahman bin Mahdi (d. 198 H), for instance, viewed that knowing the ‘illah of a hadith was more interesting than composing twenty hadiths from other narrators (Ibn Abi Hatim, 2006). However, most hadith scholars admitted that the discipline of ‘ilal al-hadith was not easy to master. This was because the defects or ‘illah in a hadith were sometimes hidden, resulting it being categorized as authentic. Therefore, scholars who were experts in this field certainly had keen eyes and broad knowledge on the intricacies of the narrations and narrators of hadiths. In furtherance to the above, according to Ibn al-Salah (d. 643 H) this discipline can only be mastered by scholars from among those who memorized the al-Quran who also had deep understanding (2002). Concurring with that view, Ibn Hajar (d. 852 H) believed that this discipline of knowledge is so hidden and so detailed that only those endowed by Allah with extensive and in-depth knowledge of maratib al-rawah were able to conquer it (Ibn Hajar, 1994). Thus, ‘Iwad Allah states that only a few scholars have had this expertise and most of them were from the mutaqaddimin era such as ‘Ali bin al-Madini (m. 231 H), Ahmad bin Hanbal (d. 241 H), al-Bukhari (d. 254 H), Ya’qub bin Syaybah (d. 262 H), Abu Hatim (d. 277 H) and Abu Zur‘ah (d. 263 H) while scholars from the muta‘akhkhirin phase the likes of al-Daraqutni (d. 385 H), Ibn ‘Adi (d. 365 H), al-Dhahabi (d. 748 H) and Ibn Hajar (d. 852 H) (2017). According to the researcher’s survey, the main issues involved in the debate or discussions of this discipline revolves around al-tafarrud, al-mukhalaqah, ziyadah al-thiqah, tadlis etc.

1.2. Biodata of al-Daraqutni and his Scholastic Repertoire

Al-Daraqutni’s leadership in the jurisprudence of hadith reached its pinnacle when he mastered the discipline of ‘ilal al-hadith. This was mentioned by many later scholars such as al-Khātabī al-Baghdādi (d. 463 H) who said: “… ends at him the knowledge of athar and understanding of ‘ilal al-hadith, names of the narrators, and their conditions…” (Al-Khātabī, 2001, pp. 487-488). Al-Dhahabī (d.748) also celebrated him with similar praise, “… ends at him al-hifz and the knowledge of ‘ilal al-hadith and the narrators” (Al-Dhahabī, 1984, p. 450). The same was the case with Ibn Kathīr (d. 774 H) in al-Bidayah, attributing al-Daraqutni as an Imam in his time mastering the names of the narrators, sina‘ah al-ta’lil, al-jarh wa al-ta’dil (1998).

Al-Daraqutni’s expertise in this discipline is more pronounced with the writing of his book entitled al-‘Ilal al-Waridah fi al-Ahadith al-Nabawiyyah. This work is generally an explanation of al-mu‘al hadith proposed to him by his disciple named al-Barqānī (d. 425 H). There are over four thousand hadiths recounted by al-Barqānī in this work, all of which were answered by al-Daraqutni by providing various chain of narrators and explaining the existence of ‘illah that could be present in those hadiths. Al-Daraqutni’s prominence in this field became outstanding when al-Barqānī stated that the latter answered and explained the matters in question by way of imla ’ based on memory (Al-Baghdādi, 2001). Al-Dhahabī in Siyar expressed admiration for al-Daraqutni’s exceptional ability. To al-Dhahabī, if it were true that the book of al-‘Ilal was conveyed by way of imla ’ by al-Daraqutni based on his memorisation as told by al-Barqānī, then it was astounding and proved al-Daraqutni to be the best memoriser in this world (1984). There are other works where discussions by al-Daraqutni demonstrated his mastery in the discipline of ‘ilal al-hadith, two being al-Sunan and al-Izamat wa al-Tatatabbu.

2. Problem Statement

Although al-Daraqutni is a distinguished figure in the field of hadith, he is not absolved from criticism by other scholars, one of whom is a great figure in the Islamic world, al-Nawawi. Al-Nawawi’s disapproval involved al-Daraqutni’s commentaries and reviews on the status of a number of hadiths compiled in the al-Šahihayn. The former was seen as defending the status quo of the concerned group of hadiths and thereby responding to the commentaries and reviews of al-Daraqutni. What is more interesting to the researcher is that al-Nawawi did not only respond to the above but also was seen to dispute al-Daraqutni’s method in producing commentaries on the group of hadiths. One such case could be found in his commentary contained in Syarh Sahih al-Bukhari as follows:

“Al-Daraqutni had criticised hadiths al-Bukhari and Muslim and he had criticized part of the hadiths. Those criticism are corrupted (fasid), built on rules of some of the muhadithin, very weak and contrary to the methods of the majority of ahl al-fiqh and al-usul and others. As such you must not be misled by it” (Al-Nawawi, 2008, p. 245).

In other instances, al-Nawawi was again seen arguing against al-Daraqutni’s methods. This can be found in his review on a hadith compiled by Muslim narrated by Ibn Wahab from Makhramah bin Bukayr from his father from Abi Burdah bin Abi Musa RA whereby Ibn ‘Umar RA asks him:

Meaning: Did you hear your father (Abu Musa RA) reciting a hadith from the Prophet (pbuh) on a Friday (prayer)? Abu Burdah said: I said: yes I heard my father say: I heard the messenger of Allah (pbuh) (that time) is one of the times when the imam is sitting on the pulpit until he performs the prayer” (Muslim, 2006, p. 811).

According to al-Daraqutni, this hadith was not narrated in the mawsul way but instead from Makhramah bin Bukayr and from Abi Burdah only. Whereas other group of narrators recount the hadith from Abi Burdah by mawqaf (Al-Daraqutni, 1985). According to al-Nawawi, al-Daraqutni’s criticism was built on ma’ruf for him and for most ahl al-hadith; that is, in the event of conflict between mawqaf and marfu’, mursal and mawsul narrations, they would exercise tarjih to give weight on mawqaf and mursal. Al-Nawawi further added that this method was weak and unacceptable (mamnu’ah). The proper methods are the ones practiced by the al-usuliyyun, al-fuqaha’, al-Bukhari, Muslim and muhadith that is by engaging tarjih on marfu’ and mawsul because it is included in the discussion of ziyadah al-thiqah (2001).

The above two excerpts are examples of al-Nawawi’s criticism on al-Daraqutni’s methods. Given the esteemed position of al-Nawawi in the Islamic world, the researcher humbly submits that his criticisms needs to be heeded meticulously in order to determine whether the allegations are founded.

3. Research Questions

Based on the research issues mentioned above, a number of research questions have been raised as follows:

3.1. What topic of ‘ilal al-hadith is the subject of al-Nawawi’s dispute over al-Daraqutni’s method?

3.2. How does their respective methods fare in the topic?

3.3. Was al-Daraqutni’s practice in that topic weak and corrupted (fasid)?

4. Purpose of the Study

The purpose of the study is as follows:

4.1. To identify the topic in ‘ilal al-hadith that is the subject of al-Nawawi’s dispute over al-Daraqutni’s method.

4.2. To study the ruling of al-Daraqutni and al-Nawawi of the issues.
4.3. To analyse the ruling practised by al-Daraqutni in the issues.

5. Research Methods

This research is a fully qualitative study and involves data collection sourced from library research. Accordingly, the primary works of al-Daraqutni and al-Nawawi shall be the main source of reference for the researcher i.e al-Ilzamat wa al-Tatabbu’, Syarh Sahih al-Bukhari, Syarh Sahih Muslim and Irsyad Tullab al-Haqa’iq ila Ma’rifah Sunan Khayr al-Khala’iq Sallallah ‘Alayh wa Sallam. In addition, the researchers have also referred to several other sources such as Al-Imam al-Nawawi wa Atharuh fi al-Hadith wa ‘Ulumih, Al-Sina’ah al-Hadithiyyah fi Syarh al-Nawawi ‘ala Sahih Muslim, Manhaj al-Imam al-Daraqutni fi Kitabih al-Sunan wa Atharihi fi Ikhtilaf al-Fuqaha’ dan Manhaj al-Imam al-Daraqutni fi Naqd al-Hadith fi Kitab ‘Ilal. The data collected will be analysed based on inductive and deductive methods.

According to De. Groot (1969), inductive method refers to rules of analyzing data through facts finding from something specific into general. In the context of this research, the researcher shall study the types of criticism levelled by al-Nawawi against the methodology engaged by al-Daraqutni contained in two major works i.e al-Ilzamat wa al-Tatabbu’ and Syarh Sahih Muslim. Thereafter, the criticism will be analyzed based on common theory formulated by hadith scholars. Deductive method on the other hand, according to De. Groot (1969), refers to data analysis based on facts finding from something general into specific. From this perspective, the researcher shall scrutinize each theory made guidelines by hadith scholars; in particular in matters revolving around the criticism made by al-Nawawi against the method employed by al-Daraqutni further analyse the said methodologies specifically in order to respond to the question of whether or not the criticism compromised al-Daraqutni’s standing in the discipline of ‘ilal al-hadith.

6. Findings

6.1. The topic in ‘ilal al-hadith that is the subject of al-Nawawi’s dispute over al-Daraqutni’s methods

The findings of this study illustrate the topics in the discipline of ‘ilal al-hadith disputed by al-Nawawi on the methods implemented by al-Daraqutni is about the issues of ziyadah al-thiqah. Al-Nawawi’s criticism, according to al-Wadi’i (Al-Daraqutni, 1985), ‘Abd al-‘Aziz (1988) and Ibrahim (2008), largely revolves around ziyadah al-thiqah that is in the preferential (tarjih) hadith between marfu’ and mursal or mawsul and mawquf (2008). To illustrate, the researcher provides a hadith narrated by Muslim through the narration of Ibn Wahab from Makhramah bin Bukayr from his father from Abi Burdah bin Abi Musa RA from Ibn ‘Umar RA (Muslim, 2006). Apart from the issues of ziyadah al-thiqah, al-Nawawi also disputes al-Daraqutni’s methods in the al-tafarrud narration from a reliable narrator. This is evidenced by his commentary on a hadith reported by Muslim from the narrator’s chain of Ibn Abjar from Wasil from Abi Wa’il from ‘Ammar from the Prophet (pbuh):

Meaning: the length of a man’s prayer and the brevity of his sermons infer his shallow understanding. Hence, extend your prayers and shorten your sermon because part of bayan (beautiful phrases) becomes a spell to the listeners (Muslim, 2006, p. 813).
According to al-Daraqutni (1985), this hadith was narrated by way of al-tafarrud by Ibn Abjar from Wasil. The former further explained that this narration conflicted with that of al-A’mash and he was more ahfaz with the hadith by Abi Wa’il than Wasil. This review was objected by al-Nawawi who viewed that the above hadith review by al-Daraqutni exemplified rejected criticism because Ibn Abjar was a reliable narrator, thereby it was compulsory to accept his narrations. These two types of narrations namely ziyadah al-thiqah and al-tafarrud from reliable narrator are the main issues in the discipline of ‘ilal al-hadith. Hence al-Nawawi’s criticism of al-Daraqutni’s method on both indirectly affected his eminence in ‘ilal al-hadith discipline.

6.2. The ruling of al-Daraqutni and al-Nawawi in ziyadah al-thiqah and al-tafarrud.

It is found that the methods used by al-Nawawi and al-Daraqutni on the issues of ziyadah al-thiqah and al-tafarrud from reliable narrators were different. In the context of ziyadah al-thiqah, al-Nawawi opined that this type of hadith was admissible in total. Accordingly in the event of conflict between marfu’ and mursal and mawqif and mawsul narrations, the correct stance is to give weight on marfu’ and mursal even though the narrators of the conflicting hadiths are of the same number or more, or more ahfaz than the other. This assessment according to al-Nawawi was the practise of the muhaqqiqun from amongst the ahl al-hadith and the fuqaha and ashab al-usul and endorsed by al-Khatib al-Baghdadi (Al-Nawawi, 2001). In the context of al-tafarrud narration by reliable narrators, the ruling espoused by al-Nawawi was to accept the hadith due to the attribute of the narrator which was reliable (thiqah). This ruling is found in his work entitled al-Irsyad. He further explained that if al-tafarrud came from a narrator who was just (‘adil), a memoriser (hafiz) and his memory is believed to be of excellent state (dabit), then his narration would be classified as authentic (sahih). Furthermore, if the al-tafarrud came from a narrator who was not dabit, his hadith became hasan. However, if al-tafarrud came from a narrator who was far from dabit, and ‘adil, his narration became syadh, munkar and rejected (Al-Nawawi, 2009). As for al-Daraqutni’s ruling on the two situations above, the question on accepting or rejecting depended on the strength of the evidence (qarinah) inherent in the hadiths. In other words, these two types of narrations were not outrightly accepted nor rejected. This was acknowledged by some researchers the likes of Kilani (2010) and Judah (2011). Since the ruling of both al-Nawawi and al-Daraqutni were different on the two issues mentioned above, therefore it was fitting for al-Nawawi to disagree with the assessment of al-Daraqutni.

6.3. The methodology practised specifically by al-Daraqutni.

Nonetheless, what remains to be answered is whether the methodology practised by al-Daraqutni is as weak and corrupted as al-Nawawi alleges. Through this research, it is found that al-Daraqutni’s method is no stranger to the scholars at large particularly from amongst the mutaqaddimin. In the matters of ziyadah al-thiqah, for example, the ruling of al-Daraqutni was in line with the ruling of ahl al-hadith mutaqaddimin. This observation coincided with the reality as pictured by al-‘Alla’i (d.761 H) where he said the Imams of mutaqaddimin such as Yahya bin Sa’id al-Qattan, ‘Abd al-Rahman bin Mahdi, ‘Ali bin al-Madini, Ahmad bin Hanbal, Yahya bin Ma’in, al-Bukhari, Abu Hatim, Abu Zur‘ah, Muslim, al-Nasa’i, al-Tirmidhi, al-Daraqutni and al-Khalili evaluated the element of al-ziyadah based on the stronger preference (tarjih) of each hadith. He further remarked that these group of scholars do not evaluate the element of al-ziyadah in a mass manner for all hadiths. Their method was the truth (Kamil, 1986). In line with the views above, Ibn Hajar (d. 852 H) also stated that the mutaqaddimin hadith scholars such as ‘Abd al-Rahman bin Mahdi, Yahya al-Qattan, Ahmad bin Hanbal, Yahya bin Ma‘in, ‘Ali bin al-Madini, al-Bukhari, Abu Zur‘ah, Abu Hatim, al-Nasa‘i, al-Daraquṭnī and others assessed the element of ziyadah al-thiqah based on qarinah. In addition, none of them accepted this element as absolute (Ibn Hajar, 2000).

As for the issue of al-tafarrud narration from reliable narrators; as well as the ruling formulated by al-Daraquṭnī, both elements were no stranger in the discourse of criticism in sciences of hadith among the hadith jurists. In fact they were in line with the methods and policies already employed by the mutaqaddimin hadith scholars. The same observation is demonstrated by contemporary research similar to al-Durays (2005), al-Lahim (2012) and al-Malyabari (2001).

7. Conclusion

Al-Nawawi’s disputations on the methods implemented by al-Daraquṭnī in the discipline of ‘ilal al-hadīth pertained to the issues of ziyadah al-thiqah and al-tafarrud narration from reliable narrators. Al-Nawawi opined that these issues are admissible in total. Besides, al-Daraquṭnī’s ruling on these issues whether to accept or to reject depends on the strength of the evidence. Based on the discussions above, it is found that the methods of al-Daraquṭnī on the two issues that come under the fire of criticism of al-Nawawi are already the methods in practice by the mutaqaddimin hadith scholars. On al-Nawawi’s criticism that al-Daraquṭnī’s methods were weak and corrupted, the researcher is of the opinion that those assessments were inaccurate and they do not compromise al-Daraquṭnī’s reputation, particularly in the discipline of ‘ilal al-hadīth. This finding also reinforced the methods practiced by him since those were also the practice of the hadith scholars in the past ahl al-hadith mutaqaddimin.
